W: Hello, students. Last time, we talked about the important role of charities. Today, let's talk about how you can help, too. Recently, a survey revealed that almost 90 percent of charity donors donate cash. But there are some secondhand items you can donate to them instead of money. First, musical instruments are valuable items. They can be provided to children who can't afford new ones. Second, eyeglasses can be donated as well. They can be sent to developing nations, where they are hard to find. Third, bikes are warmly accepted, too. Many children in poor countries have to walk over ten kilometers to go to school. Your bike donation can be a great gift to them. Finally, you can give your old running shoes a second life. They can be repaired and delivered to people in need. So when you go home, look for items you can donate to help others.
